Its a static class, not a dedicated virtual class, so you can't add instance variables or methods to it. You have to write your own implementation. For example: public abstract class SimpleProtector { public void test() { System.out.println("Test"); } } ... protected void addProtection() { SimpleProtector simpleProtector = new SimpleProtector(); simpleProtector.test(); } Of course you can't add your own implementation of test() and instead of just testing "Test" it will print the output of test(), which in your case would be your own method. International Day of Prayer for Life The International Day of Prayer for Life is an annual observance, held on January 22 of each year, since 1990. The observance celebrates the sanctity of life, and commemorates the start of the Great Schism and the Gregorian reformation on January 21, 999. The observance was started by the Catholic Church's Ecclesiastical Assembly of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of England and Wales (CBCEW), a joint body of clergy, consecrated women, and laity. The CBCEW was the first part of the Anglican Communion to recognize the observance. In the United States, the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) observed the day from 1994 to 2009, when it was changed to the International Day of Prayer for Life. In 2010, the observance was changed again, this time back to the International Day of Prayer for Life.
